Dear fellow visionaries,

I applaud your efforts to respond to community response to the new County Comprehensive Plan. It is abundantly evident in the new text. To be brief, a few suggestions follow.

Along with other efforts to bring the islands along to the next two centuries, responding to population growth and sea level rise, I would like to see an intention to focus on new ways (and new building codes) to get our drinking water and new ways of handling human waste to bring us into the next century. With or without sea level rise, I do not believe that conservation is sufficient to meet our needs. I am hearing that there is a push back on these issues because of fear of over population. While lack of housing is also a county issue, this needs to be resolved. I am not suggesting that we allow unbridled growth, but instead that there is assurance that both issues have checks and balances.

I note that there are many lovely parcels for sale on Lopez, yet these have been languishing as far as construction is concerned. What is in the way? This needs to be addressed.

Thanks for listening!

Best regards,
